Delivering an open, light feel while maintaining privacy

BDO's new office is one of contrast. The space is open, punctured by two glass atriums, flooded by natural light and designed to maximise its stunning Auckland waterfront views - yet it also provides essential privacy for its clients. A café area acts as informal meeting space and provides an indoor garden feel, which is enhanced by the use of natural American oak elements throughout the space. Harder elements are constantly softened by curves, lighting and furnishings.
